“GASLAND” IS COMING TO NEW JERSEY - Free Screening
June 3 Rutgers EcoComplex, 1200 Florence-Columbus Rd., Bordentown, NJ

Bordentown, NJ: “GASLAND”, a new documentary film by acclaimed filmmaker Josh Fox will be featured at the Rutgers EcoComplex in Bordentown Thursday, June 3, to kick off a 20-stop tour of Pennsylvania and New York in a run-up to the June 21st HBO premiere of the film, which is the winner of this year’s Sundance Film Festival’s Special Jury Prize. ADMISSION IS FREE. The film exposes pollution and community impacts that are plaguing the places where natural gas drilling occurs.

The evening will begin with a reception and refreshments at 6:00 pm at the EcoComplex before the film to meet Josh Fox. The film is at 7:00 pm, followed by a panel discussion with Robert Tudor, Deputy Director, Delaware River Basin Commission; Matt Elliott, Global Warming and Clean Energy Advocate, Environment New Jersey; Tracy Carluccio, Deputy Director, Delaware Riverkeeper Network; and Josh Fox.

“As gas drillers get ready to drill in the Delaware River Watershed, upriver in New York and in Pennsylvania, including across the River in Bucks County, people need to know the truth and to fight for protecting communities, the River, its tributaries and watershed from being overrun by this new industry”, said Maya van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper. 2.8 million New Jersey residents, about one third of the State’s population, and more than 15 million people elsewhere, rely on the Delaware for drinking water which flows downstream to New Jersey water intakes from the regions where industry wants to drill.

As a special bonus for this event, there will be a drawing for 2 tickets to the July 11th Jack Johnson concert at the Susquehanna Bank Center in Camden for a $40 donation ($20 each ticket), which will be matched dollar for dollar by the Jackson Ohana Challenge. On his 2010 To The Sea World Tour, singer-songwriter Jack Johnson and the All At Once social network are collaborating with hand-chosen community groups from all around the world to inspire community engagement.
