Dear Governor Cuomo and Commissioner Martens,

The 76 organizational signatories to this letter are writing on behalf of our hundreds of thousands of members urging you to hold a public comment period sufficient to allow ample opportunity for New Yorkers to weigh in on the state's revised Draft Supplemental Generic Environmental Impact Statement on the Oil Gas and Solution Mining Regulatory Program ("dSGEIS").

We stand with the New York State Assembly in requesting a 180 day public comment period. The revised dSGEIS is clearly a long and technical document that will require a substantial amount of time to review and analyze. The 60-day period proposed by DEC is wholly inadequate. The agency provided 90 days on the last draft, and this version seems to be even more comprehensive.

The proposals contained in the revised draft SGEIS will likely impact the majority of the land in New York by allowing drilling in the Marcellus and Utica shales and/or through fracking-related trucking and waste disposal proposals. As the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) stated in its June 30, 2011 press release this revised draft will impact nearly 85% of the areas overlying the Marcellus Shale, as well as all of the area overlaying the Utica Shale. These New Yorkers whose daily lives will be impacted by increased industrial activity, increased truck traffic, and spills or accidents need the time to fully understand and weigh in on the state's proposed plan. Additionally, some of our organizations will be consulting with technical experts to develop our own comments. These experts will need sufficient time to analyze and draft reports so that we may furnish DEC with comments that are based on the most well-informed and up-to-date science on which to base any revisions to the next draft.

Public hearings should also be a major component of the public input process for the revised dSGEIS. Public hearings are an essential part of the democratic process in America and providing ample amount of time to testify (6 minutes per individual) while allowing enough total time to hear from the many citizens who come out to have their voices heard is essential for the public to not only to participate but also have faith that their voices are heard.

During the comment period on the 2009 dSGEIS, DEC held hearings in Binghamton, Sullivan County, New York City, and Delaware County. The DEC should return to these specific locations for hearings on the revised dSGEIS in addition to holding official hearings in as many areas as possible to increase public participation by affected communities. Additional areas should include Western New York, the Hudson Valley and areas where citizens came out to public hearings on the 2009 dSGEIS held by local municipalities.

Finally, our organizations would like to thank DEC for offering easy, electronic means to submit comments on the dSGEIS in the past. We encourage DEC to again host a web form on the Department's website as well as accept comments via email and standard mail on the revised dSGEIS. The web form and email options greatly increased the public's ability to participate in the 2009 public comment process.

Thank you for considering our requests, and we look forward to your response. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to reach out to Katherine Nadeau of Environmental Advocates of New York at knadeau@eany.org or 518.227.1432
