Do All Your Holiday Shopping with the Delaware Riverkeeper Network

New Hope, PA: The Delaware Riverkeeper Network's 8th Annual Craft show taking place the weekend of December 11-12, 2010, at the Eagle Ballroom, Eagle Fire Company, on the corner of Sugas Road and Rt. 202 in New Hope, PA.

According to the Delaware Riverkeeper Network the holiday craft show is an opportunity to benefit the environment and local businesses -- allowing folks to shop from local artists and crafters while supporting the Delaware Riverkeeper Network.

According to the organization, the Delaware Riverkeeper Network's craft show highlights a wide variety of high quality, locally made handmade crafts, jewelry, wearable art, ceramics, wood, glass, mixed media, watercolors, oils, pastels, and photography.

"We like to introduce our community and members to our local crafters, and to support the local artisans that make our region special" says Tim White, the event's organizer.

"Shopping at our craft show allows folks to reduce the amount of driving they have to do because we offer such great variety and quality in a single location" added Maya van Rossum, the Delaware Riverkeeper. Van Rossum adds "when you shop our craft show you'll be saving gas, reducing your carbon footprint and supporting local economies, all while helping to protect the River.
